How have workers fared under the latest developments of capitalism in Asia, Eastern Europe and Russia, and Latin America? How have they been affected by globalization? What changes have occurred on the shopfloor, in incomes, in labor markets, and in communities? What difference has politics made in cushioning or exacerbating these effects? How have workers responded, economically and politically? These are the questions that motivate inquiry in Politics 314.
The seminar will involve reading and discussing a number of different perspectives and debates about labor under late twentieth and early twenty-first century capitalism, the impact of globalization on labor around the world, and the conflict these processes have generated. Through these readings and discussions we will jointly explore and debate ideas, hypotheses and theoretical models that should prove fruitful in writing your research paper. Since this is a seminar, we expect you to complete the weekly reading and come to class prepared to discuss the issues raised.

The first nine sessions will involve critical discussion of the readings. By the end of Tuesday before each class, you are to post comments and at least two discussion questions about the week’s reading on our seminar’s Blackboard discussion board. These will form the basis for our discussions and are essential for the success of that enterprise. Then on each Wednesday before class, take a few moments to log in to the discussion board to read what everyone has written. You can find Blackboard at: http://bb.oberlin.edu/FAQ for students can be found at: http://www.oberlin.edu/OCTET/Bb/FAQ_Students.htm

The extended research paper (approximately 20-25 pages) will comprise a major part of the course. To make completing the paper more manageable, we will break the research and writing into a number of components, according the following schedule:

- a meeting with one of us to define a topic sometime before class meeting of March 10.
- a 1-2 page proposal for your research topic, which should include a statement of your research question(s); justification of the topic in terms of its interest and importance; any anticipated problems and proposed solutions, due March 17.
- an annotated bibliography, which identifies and evaluates a variety of research materials, due March 24.
- a 1-2 page introduction to your paper, including your thesis statement, due April 2.
- a detailed outline of your paper, due April 14.
- a meeting with the instructor to discuss your progress something during the week of April 19.
- a draft of your paper, due April 28.
- a presentation of your “works in progress” to the class; the last three sessions will be devoted to these presentations and discussion of your papers in progress.
- the final paper, along with your draft(s) and the other above materials, will be due May 14 (the last day permitted by College regulations).
We will evaluate your work according to the following weighting:

- Class participation, including your regular postings to the Blackboard discussion board and the presentation to the class: 50%
- Research paper: 50%

Please take careful note of these proportions. They reflect our conviction that the daily process of participating in the course by reading, thinking and contributing to everyone else's learning in discussion is as important to your learning as the paper you will write. In the past students who assumed that the paper was their only responsibility for the course were unpleasantly surprised at the end of the semester.

Please purchase the following books, which are available from the Oberlin College bookstore:

- Hagen Koo, Korean Workers: The Culture and Politics of Class Formation
- Kim Moody, Workers in a Lean World
- Dani Rodrik, Has Globalization Gone Too Far?

---

Schedule of Classes, Topics, Readings and Assignments

February 12: Introduction

February 19: Labor and Globalization

- Jeffrey Harrod, Power, Production, and the Unprotected Worker, pp. 183-233

February 26: The Debate over Sweatshops

- Jeffrey Harrod, Power, Production, and the Unprotected Worker, part 2 and chapter 4
- Jeremy Seabrook, In the Cities of the South, chapters 1-3, 6
March 3: Labor in Mexico

Dan La Botz, Mask of Democracy, chapters 1-2; 4, 7 and Conclusion
John Audley et al., NAFTA’s Promise and Reality: Lessons from Mexico for the Hemisphere (on e-res)
Worker Rights Consortium, “Investigation Re Complaint Against Kukdong (Mexico) Preliminary Findings And Recommendations, January 24, 2001” (on E-res)
Centro de Apoyo al Trabajador, “La Lucha Sigue: Stories from the People of the Kukdong Factory” (on E-res)

March 10: Labor in Korea

Meet with one of us before this class to define your topic.
Hagen Koo, Korean Workers

March 17: Labor in India and China

Research proposal due

Patrick Heller, The Labor of Development, introduction and chapters 5, 7, and conclusion
Marc Blecher, “Hegemony and Workers’ Politics in China,” China Quarterly, June 2002

March 24: Labor in Russia and Eastern Europe

Annotated bibliography due

Sarah Ashwin ‘Redefining the Collective: Russian Mineworkers in Transition’ in Michael Burawoy and Katherin Verdery, eds, Ethnographies of Transition
Stephen Crowley, “Comprehending the Weakness of Russia’s Unions,” Demokratizatsiya, Spring 2002
April 7: What Does This Mean for “Us”?

Introduction due

Meet with one of us this week or next (N.b. Mr. Blecher is out of town next week.)

- Dani Rodrik, Has Globalization Gone Too Far?, chapters 1-4
- Kim Moody, Workers in a Lean World, chapters 7-8

April 14: No class — work on research

Outline due (to Mr. Crowley’s office or via e-mail; and via e-mail only to Mr. Blecher)

April 21: What Is To Be Done?

- Kim Moody, Workers in a Lean World, chapters 9-11, conclusion
- Liza Featherstone, Students Against Sweatshops, introduction, chapters 1-4, 7 (on reserve)
- Theodore Moran, Beyond Sweatshops, chapters 4, 6 (on reserve)
- Workers in an Integrating World, World Development Report, chapters 7-8, 11-12 (on reserve)

April 28 and May 5 & 12: presentations of draft research papers

April 28: Draft due

May 14, 4:30 PM: Final research papers due